

February 6th, 2015

Dear parents,

We had another good week! The nice weather today sure made it feel great outside. Please be sure to send ALL winter gear with your child. Some students don't have mittens and then go play in the snow. I do my best to tell them to keep their hands out of the snow, but you know kids! I can't imagine how cold their little fingers get.

This week in language arts we finished up talking about teamwork and how we work together. On Wednesday we started talking about the seasons. For our comprehension skill we will focus on making predictions when we read. We have started working on number words for sight word practice. Please continue to work on these at home.

In math we started our measurement unit. This week we compared lengths of items. Next week the students will get to measure items around the room using a nonstandard unit of measurement. (cubes, links, paperclips) We will also take a closer look at the weight of objects.

Valentine's is next week so we have started some projects to help celebrate the fun holiday. Next week's centers involve valentines in some way. The kids are looking forward to our centers.

Have a good weekend!

Mrs. Hamm ☺

Please remember that there is no school on Friday the 13th or Monday the 16th.

Other reminders:

February 25th-1:30 dismissal-all buildings

February 26th & 27th-NO SCHOOL-KINDERGARTEN only-kindergarten round-up